Exam 04: Study Guide

This exam will be closer in general format to the first two exams, with 10 individual questions pulled from the worksheets (some questions have been broken into parts). As with Exam 3, you will be given a distribution table, which you are welcome to use.

The biggest change for this exam is that it is unavoidable that I will want to ask many questions that you will already know the answers to from the distribution sheet.[1] So, for these (indicated by instructions that start with "Justify that...") I will be grading your work rather than the results. This not a proof-writing class and I will not be too picky about the exact minutia of your argument. I just need to see enough work that I can follow the main steps leading to the result. Do not stress too much about this. When I give exams where the answers are know and we are just filling in the steps the grades tend to be higher.

Note: We will have a review session during the second half of class on Monday, 6 November, rather than the evening before the exam. I will also be available on Monday afternoon (2:30-4:30) in my office (INTL 316) for drop-in office hours if you have additional questions.

[1] Yes, I could not give you the sheet, but then you would just waste your time memorizing it instead of learning out to do the problems themselves
